IMAGINE THIS IS YOUR LIFE

- You are born developmentally disabled.
- Your parents argue about how to best take care of you.
- Your mother ‘babies’ you; she’s afraid that you’ll get hurt.
- Your father withdraws from you; he’s embarrassed that you’re not ‘normal’.
- Your younger siblings learn faster than you. Before you know it they’re doing things that you’re not allowed to do.
- Your body is clumsy and slow; you have trouble remembering things.
- You look different than other children, they tease you, they don’t play with you.
- Nobody wants to be your friend.
- You learn pretty quickly that other people are smarter than you are; nobody trusts you to make good decisions – even yourself.
- Sometimes you have seizures and you lose control over your body; afterwards you feel funny and confused.
- You go to a special school; people there are pretty strange.
- You have trouble communicating what you need. Sometimes you freak out and lose control.
- You get sent to special doctors to ‘fix’ your problems.
- You don’t get many opportunities to explore on your own. Family and helpers are involved in all areas of your life (even the ones that you would rather keep private).
- Your family can’t deal with all of your special needs; you go to live in a residential school with other people who have problems.
- You move into a group home. You don’t have any choice about where you live or who you live with, you are told you are lucky.
- Sometimes the people that you live with have problems of their own – you don’t know how to cope with them.
- You have a counselor who is there to help you. You like having a counselor, but each time you get used to one, they leave. It’s hard to trust people.
- You go to workshop during the day – it is crowded and noisy.
- When there’s work, you get paid only a small amount of money – when there is no work, you sit around and do nothing.
- You have a girlfriend / boyfriend. It is hard to get to see him/her. Other people decide what you can and cannot do together.

YOU AND I

Consumer	STAFF
1. I am a resident.	1. You reside.
2. I am admitted.	2. You move in.
3. I am aggressive.	3. You are assertive.
4. I have behavior problems.	4. You are rude.
5. I am non-compliant.	5. You don't like being told what to do.
6. When I ask you out for dinner, it is an outing.	6. When you ask someone out it is a date.
7. I don't know how many people have read the progress notes people write about me. I don't even know what is in there.	7. You didn't speak to your best friend after she read your journal.
8. I made mistakes during my check writing project. Someday I might get a bank account.	8. You forgot to record some withdrawals from your account. The bank called to remind you.
9. I celebrated my birthday with five consumers and two staff members. I hope my family sends a card.	9. Your family threw you a surprise party. Your brother couldn't make it. It sounded wonderful.
10. My case manager sends a report every month to my guardian. It says everything I did wrong and no things I did right.	10. You are still mad at your sister for calling your mother after you got a speeding ticket.
11. I am on special diet because I am five pounds over my ideal body weight.	11. Your doctor gave up telling you to lose weight.
12. I am learning household skills.	12. You hate house housework.
13. I am learning leisure skills.	13. Your shirt says that you are a "couch potato."
14. After I do my budget tonight, I might get to McDonald's – if I have enough money.	14. You were glad that the new French restaurant accepted credit cards.
15. My (case manager, psychologist, RN, occupational therapist, physical therapist, nutritionist, and home staff) sets goals for me for the next year.	15. You haven't decided what you want out of life.
16. Someday I will be discharged. Maybe.	16. You will move onward and upward.

Consumer Rights and Responsibilities Fact Sheet

1. All people have the same rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.
2. OMRDD clearly states the no person shall be denied any rights solely because of the diagnosis of a developmental disability. In some states you cannot vote, cannot drive a car and cannot marry if you are diagnosed with a developmental disability. In New York State, a person's ability level is most important, not their diagnosis.
3. Because a person has rights it doesn't mean they can do whatever they want. They must assume the responsibilities that go with those rights.
4. If there is a need to limit a person's rights, the treatment team must submit their plan to the Human Rights Committee for approval. The consumer has a right to object to any of the findings and proper procedures must be followed.
5. In each individual's file there is a residence rights statement that should be read and reviewed.
6. No person should be denied any of their rights due to any discrimination, including their age, their race, or their sexual orientation.

The following lists of Clients Rights are predominantly compiled from the New York State Department of Mental Retardation/Developmental Disabilities Regulations on the Rights of People with Mental Retardation/Developmental Disabilities. Please retain this list for future reference.

THE CLIENT RIGHTS ASSESSMENT STRATEGY
1. Are rights involved?
2. Are health / safety issues involved?
3. Are the rights of others involved?
4. What is the least restrictive method of intervention?
5. Does it involve a dignity of risk issue?
6. Does the method of intervention need to be adapted to the individual's disability level?
